Survey in the works for RV parking issue

Bylaw may be up for revision following survey approval and feedback this summer

BY MADISON SAMUEL-
 BARCLAY
 Review Staff

A survey may be in the works for Didsbury residents to fill out to determine how the community feels about RV parking in town.

Peace Officer Derek Sutherland appeared before council at the Feb. 14 committee of the whole meeting to present a rough draft of the survey for revisions, questions and further comments.

"We've received many complaints, from RV pads to parking on driveways and on front lawns," said Sutherland. "People have been suggesting that it's an unsightly condition."

The survey, once approved by council, will be distributed throughout the town to collect feedback on the issue and help council make a decision as to whether the RV parking bylaw requires a revision.

The current bylaw's wording was described as "broad" by Sutherland, and a fine-tuning of definitions would likely be in order if the bylaw was brought up for revision.

In particular, the definition of "front lawn" was too broad in the bylaw, with the term being stated in the bylaw as a lawn, driveway, RV pad and anything in front of a residence.

Sutherland stated that he hoped the survey would be revised and approved before the summer, so that information can be collected and that council can make a decision about the bylaw before the RV-heavy summer season hits.

The survey will also be available through "any avenue that we have", according to Sutherland, citing that the survey will be available to take online through the town's Facebook and Twitter feed when it's ready.

"It's a hot topic, so we have to examine it properly before we make a decision," said Mayor Brian Wittal.

A report on other municipalities in the area's practices and bylaws on RV parking were also presented to council for consideration, though Sutherland admitted that opinions tended to vary heavily between locations.

Mountainview Colts win first series in playoffs

BY MADISON SAMUEL-
BARCLAY
Review Staff

The Mountainview Colts have stepped up their game, winning their first series in the Heritage Junior Hockey League playoffs, beating out the Airdrie Thunder.

The last game of the series was held at the Didsbury Memorial Complex on Feb. 15, with the Colts seizing victory with a 6-3 win, and a former 5-4 win.

"I'm not really surprised," said Colts Head Coach Gord Olsen on making it and retaining their spot in the playoffs this year. "We've been a good team all year, we've been a competitive team."

Facing Airdrie was something of an initial challenge for the Colts, as the Colts had yet to win a game against the Airdrie Thunder in some time, admitted Olsen.

"It's the first two games in two years that we've beat Airdrie," said Olsen. "We've either tied or lost. They've had the upper hand for some reason."

"I thought it went extremely well," added Olsen. "We put [Airdrie's] backs against the wall. That win against them in a long time really boosted the boys' confidence and made that second game not really a contest."

The approach for the series games, and for the playoffs as a whole, for the Colts, though, is to keep players out of the penalty box and on the ice to seize victory.

"We're a team that gets a lot of penalties, so we need to stay out of the box and keep our mouths shut," said Olsen. "The boys did that and were rewarded for it."

Last year the Colts managed to land among the top five teams for the playoffs, but lost out in their first series. Olsen stated that the previous taste of the playoffs has helped give this year's team additional experience to help pull them along.

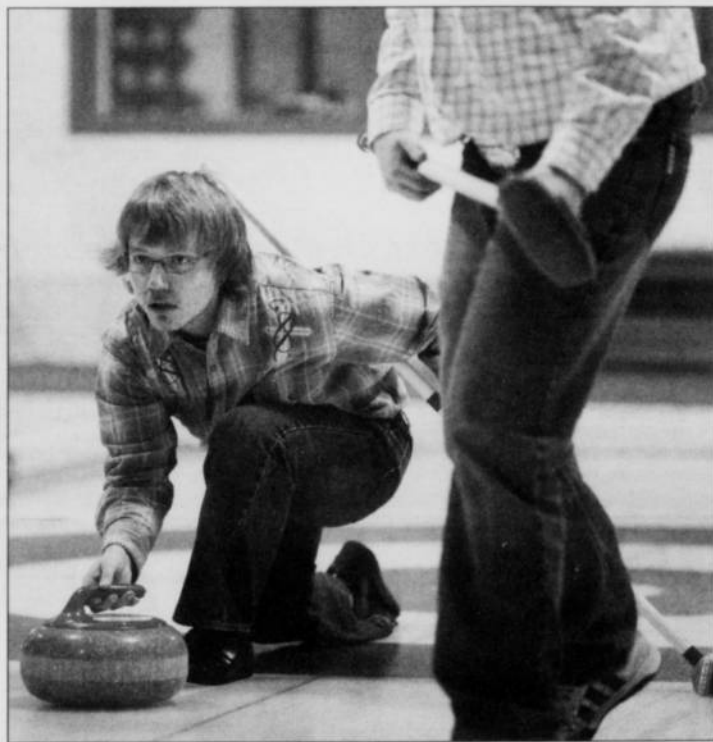

"The team has a year of experience behind them now, that's all a coach can ask for," said Olsen. "In addition to some new players, we're still a young team, but we have some quality players. We're going to keep playing good, disciplined hockey and keep these kids on their A-game."

"The Tyke #3 Team is a force to be reckoned with in their league and exhibition games with a remarkable 7-4-3 standing. A big thrill for them was being invited to play during the first intermission at the Olds Grizzly's game on Jan 14th and they got a special visit from Grinwald. Since our last update, Keagan Knutson has scored his first goal and everyone was so excited for him! Coaches have been pushing the team with some great drills, everyone is constantly improving and strengthening their love of the game! The team and their supporters are hard at work getting ready for their home tournament taking place March 9th - 11th so be prepared to come out and cheer them on! A couple away tournaments - Redcliff March 3rd-4th and Cammore March 23rd - 25th will really challenge the team and keep them hustling to finish off their season. Our superstars that will be advancing up to Novice next year are Billy Hooson Jr., Anna Bischke and Jarrett Miller who have all been a great example to the beginners and really excelled in moving the scoreboard! It has been an incredible year for the entire team and we'll celebrate all of their accomplishments at the Year End Banquet in March. A huge congratulations to a super-great team and a huge thanks to coaches, parents, grandparents and siblings for all your support and time dedicated to this team. Our stars from left to right, top: Jarrett Miller, Billy Hooson Jr, Jaxson Hosegood, Cole Howard, Chase Aarsby, Anna Bischke. Driver charged in October fatal collision

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAU
Review Staff

Charges have been laid against a 21-year-old male from Edmonton following a fatal collision on Oct. 1 that occurred on the QE II.

The Edmonton man has been charged with one count of impaired driving causing death, and one count of driving impaired over the 0.8 limit.

Didsbury RCMP said the results of a blood alcohol test showed the suspect was three times over the legal limit.

The collision occurred on the highway between the Carstairs and Didsbury overpasses when a 2005

Chevrolet Impala lost control and crossed into the centre median, where it went through the cable fence and struck a 2009 Mercury Grand Marquis.

The driver of the Impala was transported to Calgary with non-life-threatening injuries, and the 23-year-old front-seat passenger was released at the scene, having not been injured at all.

The 24-year-old passenger in the back seat had not been wearing a seatbelt and was fatally injured.

The Marquis's 70-year-old driver and 65-year-old passenger were transported to Didsbury Hospital with minor injuries and were later released.

Abdirahman Said Ahmed will be appearing in court on Feb. 27.

Truck driver survives rollover accident

BY JENNIFER ISAAC
For The Review

The driver of a truck that rolled last week was lucky to have walked away from the accident with just minor injuries, said local RCMP.

On February 14, at around 2 a.m., Didsbury RCMP officers responded to a report of a single vehicle rollover.

"The accident occurred on Highway 581 near the intersection of Range Road 291, just east of Highway 2," said Sgt. Jeff Jacobson of the Didsbury RCMP. "Ultimately, a 2001 white Ford truck had gone off the road and hit an approach."

After hitting the approach, the truck launched into a power pole and rolled several times.

"Upon arriving at the scene, police thought that there could have been a fatality," Sgt. Jacobson said.

The 18-year-old male driver from Saskatchewan was the sole occupant of the truck. He was transported to the Foothills hospital in Calgary.

"The vehicle was a complete writeoff," said Sgt. Jacobson.

"Alcohol was not a factor."

RCMP starting seatbelt checks in Didsbury-Carstairs area

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAU
Review Staff

Didsbury RCMP performed a "seatbelt blitz" in town on Feb. 14, where a half hour was spent searching for drivers and passengers not wearing their seatbelts.

In the half hour, RCMP checked between Didsbury and Carstairs, and issued three tickets, three warnings, and observed one driver failing to back in safety.

"It's a fairly high amount of tickets and warnings for such a short time," said Sgt. Jeff Jacobson.

Jacobson said that the RCMP will continue to hold these routine blitzes at random intervals to check for seatbelts.

"We encourage the people of Didsbury to buckle up and do not become ticketed," said Jacobson. "We want it to be difficult to catch people without seatbelts because people are wearing them. Seatbelts are a very important part of vehicle operation."

Editorial Education transparency benefits everyone

The provincial government has announced that information about Alberta schools, such as enrolment trends, will now be made more readily available to parents and other members of the general public.

DAN

By making the information more easily accessible, the government says it hopes stakeholders will now have a better picture of where tax dollars are being spent and how students are benefiting from that public financial contribution.

As one of the key components of every community in West Central Alberta, the health and welfare of schools is obviously of interest to most residents.

And as such, anything that makes the education system more transparent benefits the community at large, as well as students and teachers.

"Clear, simple information helps parents understand and make informed decisions about the educational opportunities available in their local communities," said Education Minister Thomas Lukaszuk.

"School boards have long been reporting this information to the ministry. It's time to share that information with parents so they can see how jurisdictions are doing and how much funding they received as part of Budget 2012."

The education data is being provided through information sheets that are being posted on a new website: education.alberta.ca/parents/educationsys.aspx.

As well as enrolment trends for each jurisdiction, the sheets will also provide information on such things as student demographics, capital planning announcements and recent projects, the number of school and teaching staff in each division, operating budgets and accumulated surpluses.

The sheets also include data on school jurisdiction accountability, including high school completion rates, performance on provincial assessment programs, and parental involvement.

While giving parents and other stakeholders more and better access to school information is a great way to increase public awareness of the workings of the education system, educators and trustees must also continue to be given the latitude to run the schools as they see fit.

Principals and their staff members are specially trained to run schools in a professional and structured manner.

With that in mind, parents will hopefully not use the new information being made available by Alberta Education to start micro-managing their kids' education.

For example, it would probably not benefit anyone for parents to start inundating school principals with calls on exactly how surpluses should be spent.

Keeping a good eye on how things are going – and raising concerns if necessary – is a great way for parents and others to be involved in the education system.

If it works as intended, this increased transparency will make that job easier for everyone.

At the same time, educators are hired to teach students and trustees are elected to oversee that education system – and that hopefully won't change despite this new transparency.

Letter to the Editor Where is our FREE electricity?

In a letter to the editor, Miranda Keating-Erickson, the Alberta Electric System Operator's (AESO) Director of Market Design described Alberta's wholesale electricity market and wrote, "Generators compete to offer their supply to the grid. This competition benefits Albertans by ensuring they pay the lowest price possible for electricity."

On the website www.ctr-ab.ca Albertans can actually listen to an audio recording of the AESO executives describe the wholesale electricity market, as "elegant". The remarks, and description of the market are located in the audio version of AESO's overview testimony; they can be found at the 1:30:49 mark on the time scale.

According to Ms. Keating-Erickson's letter to the editor, electricity generators don't want to give their electricity away for free. They are just willing to accept nothing in return, for giving their electricity away. Think about this for a minute! If the electricity generators are willing to accept nothing, why don't we just offer $0 a megawatt to all the generators and we can all go home happy? The fact is the wholesale electricity market is biased and favours the generators. All the generators are paid the highest price offered, even when many of them are willing to sell for much less. This is just one of the reasons why Albertans are getting gouged each month.

For example: If demand is constant and the AESO requires 10,000 MW to serve the demand for the next hour. Ten generators could offer to sell a combined 9,999 MW for $0 to the market. Another generator could offer to sell the last megawatt (MW) to the market for $500. In this example, the total cost of the 10,000 MW is $500 for the hour. Under AESO's elegant pricing system, all the generators are paid $500 for each megawatt (MW). Instead of costing Albertans $500 for the hour, the AESO's elegant pricing system ensures Albertans will be charged $5,000,000 for the hour. How does this pricing system ensure Albertans get access to the lowest-priced electricity?

Ms. Keating-Erickson states in her letter that at least six different times in 2011 the hourly price of electricity actually settled at $0 a megawatt (MW). What Ms. Keating-Erickson failed to disclose in her letter is: Albertans don't get free electricity. The AESO states on page #41 of its 2008 annual report (www.aeso.ca), "There have been periods when the pool price has settled at $0/MW. This situation requires system controllers to follow supply surplus procedures to clear the market."

"Clear the market" is a technical term that means Albertans don't get access to free electricity. Albertans don't need an elegant pricing system. We need a system that allows Albertans to pay the exact price generators are willing to sell electricity.

Alberta is flush with cheap electricity. The problem with access to this electricity is not transmission lines. It is a systemically flawed and biased organization called the Alberta Electric System Operator (AESO). It's time for a change!

Warm 'winter' conditions keep sleddog run at bay

Society president still looking forward to positive weather forecast

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAY
Review Staff

"We're probably the only people right now who don't enjoy this weather," said Bill Windsor, president of the Rosebud Run Sleddog Society, regarding the unseasonably warm and snowless winter. "It's not winter, it's an extended fall, pseudo-summer."

The Rosebud Run Sleddog Classic, which was originally set for January 28 and 29, was postponed to February 25 and 26 due to the lack of snow and a previously unfavourable forecast. These dates may change again though, with the sleddog society scheduled to sit down and discuss the weather forecast and a possible later date again for the event.

The just for fun Mush Rush event has also been postponed, now sitting on its third tentative rescheduled date for March 10.

Even the slight flurry that occurred in the afternoon on February 13 didn't quite perk up hopes for proper trails for the event still scheduled for the end of the month, as a good three to four inches at minimum is needed to groom the trails, and what little snow fell began to clear shortly after, said Windsor.

"It's push and wait right now," said Windsor about how the society was handling the event dates in light of lacklustre winter weather. "It's sit and wait for any outdoor sport that needs snow right now, unless you have snow-making equipment."

Windsor went on to say that the Rosebud Run isn't the only major sled dog race waiting patiently for appropriate weather; several races all over the country are dealing with the same postponements or even cancellations due to an overall lack of snow, or a lack of cold to keep the snow in check.

"We've been through this before," Windsor assured, adding that a race had been moved to a new location in order to run when no snow had fallen in the past.

This year however the society is not planning on moving the location at all, and is going to patiently wait for snowfall, or possibly cancel if none comes.

"We'll likely postpone for

A group of Samoyed dogs sit in the back of a truck at the Rosebud Run Sleddog Classic on Jan. 30.

Noel West/Didsbury Review

one more month one more time, and after that, that will be the end of it," said Windsor. "In the event that we do have sufficient snow, though, then we will try to reschedule for the nearest weekend to accommodate. We'll jump on the bandwagon when we have snow."

The waiting game is also nothing new to mushers, who are used to event postponements and cancellations due to weather, Windsor added.

"We try to give them at least a week's notice," said Windsor on date rescheduling.

"There's been so few races though, at this point they're looking for any race to compete in at all."

However, Windsor is still confident that good snow is on its way, stating that the future forecast for the end of February is looking fairly positive at the moment, and that there is still potential for a "spring dump" of snow come March.

Rick Hansen Anniversary Relay coming to Didsbury High School

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAY
Review Staff

The Rick Hansen 25th Anniversary Relay is coming up on Feb. 29 in Didsbury. The event will retrace Rick Hansen's trek across Canada, starting over 7,000 selected participants to celebrate.

The Didsbury branch of the relay will be held at Didsbury High School, on the west side of the school (weather permitting).

Relay racers are expected to arrive between 1 and 2 p.m., with the community invited to come and support the runners and selected, difference-making community medal-bearers who will be running the Didsbury leg of the relay. The Town of Didsbury has selected Elaine McCoy as one of the "medal bearers" for the relay due to McCoy's continued volunteer efforts in the community and involved work with the Terry Fox Run every year. Didsbury High School has also selected a medal bearer, and four more have been chosen from an online contest poll.

The Didsbury portion of the relay is a 250-metre stretch which will include hot chocolate, other snacks and goodies and a celebration ceremony.

"I think the Rick Hansen Foundation is certainly a noble cause in promoting accessibility and celebrating this particular event," said Lesley Bannister, one of the key organizers on the Town of Didsbury's end of the event.

"It's completely open to the public and we encourage people to come and celebrate the people in our community who have helped to make a difference."

Two singer-songwriters join forces at Tracks

JULIE BERTRAND
MVP Staff

Lethbridge artist Karen Romanchuk will join forces with Didsbury's Kelly Tschritter for a singer-songwriter evening at Tracks this Friday at 9 p.m.

The two musicians met and became friends after Tschritter went to one of Romanchuk's concerts in Lethbridge last December.

"(Tschritter) told me that we should do a show together," said Romanchuk.

"She came down here two weekends ago and we played Friday and Saturday together."

During that weekend, the two artists practised together and got the opportunity to learn each other's music.

"I am looking forward to the concert," said Romanchuk.

"Kelly has told me that Tracks is a really nice venue and that the people are very responsive."

Romanchuk considers her music to be country-folk. One of her sources of inspiration when writing is American singer and activist Steve Earle.

"I listen to a lot of Steve Earle. I have read most of his books. I am not as upfront political as he is," said Romanchuk.

"Mine are mostly love songs. They are mostly things I experienced or imagined."

After learning to play guitar when she was six years old, Romanchuk became a professional musician at 18. She stopped touring in the late '90s to have her son, Dylan, who is also a promising musician.

"He is in a band called Shocked Standards. That band is on YouTube," said Romanchuk.

"They were the only band in Lethbridge Has Talent last year. They have done really well."

While her music career, professional life, and family life keep her really busy, she can always count on the help of her husband Darwin.

"He does a lot of the online things that need to be done, like putting the shows online," said Romanchuk.

After the Tracks concert, Romanchuk and Tschritter are planning to play another concert together in Red Deer.

New rock 'n roll music festival looking for Didsbury venue

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAY
Review Staff

Organizers have set their sights on Didsbury as the host of a new music festival with a rock 'n' roll theme this coming summer.

Mountain View Rocks, also known as Rockfest, is poised to be a one-day rock celebration and concert on July 14.

The all-day event is being organized by the Mountain View Arts Society, and will potentially act as the organization's major fundraiser of the year should the event become a reality.

The arts society is looking to book around nine bands to perform in sets throughout the day on a stage at the Didsbury Park, with a kids' area, beer gardens, and after-parties at local bars.

In the instance of inclement weather, the concert may be moved indoors to the Didsbury Memorial Complex.

The event is currently aiming for upwards of 1,500 people attending.

Cyberbullying incident raises a fresh alarm

BY VICTORIA
PATERSON
For The Review

RCMP say a recent incident of cyberbullying in Innisfail where local teens posted a rap threat-fuelled video on YouTube highlights the growing problem in the region.

Const. Rick Buisseret, the investigating officer and a former school resource officer, said since Facebook became really popular around 2008 cyberbullying has increased.

"I guess with the proliferation of social media sites kids are in contact with each other 24/7," he said.

"With Facebook, kids can send a message to one kid and everybody else jumps on the bandwagon."

The constable said many incidents of cyberbullying go unreported to police, though he added kids are now realizing it is being taken more seriously.

He said the rap video is not the first case of local teens taking to social media to target other kids.

The video was posted to YouTube a couple of days after a 16-year-old male was assaulted by an 18-year-old. That assault was under investigation when the complainant did a search of his name on YouTube, Buisseret said.

The victim discovered the video featuring his alleged attacker and a 17-year-old rapping out a threat-filled song.

"Gonna beat you real quick, take the money and I dash," is one of the lyrics Buisseret transcribed from the video, which has since been taken off of YouTube. Many of the lyrics were vulgarity-ridden.

The 18-year-old appears dancing and at parts waving a knife. The 17-year-old also appears singing along at the chorus. Buisseret said the 17-year-old is a party to the offence.

The teen's father reported the video to the police.

The police have charged the 17-year-old with uttering threats to cause bodily harm. They are still looking for the 18-year-old.

"We're encountering difficulties with him turning himself in," Buisseret said.

Charges of uttering threats to cause bodily harm or death can end up with sentences of up to 18 months or five years in jail, depending on how the Crown chooses to proceed, either by indictment or summarily.

Consequences for cyberbullying don't always end in criminal charges, however. Buisseret said a handy tool is the Town of Innisfail's community standards bylaw, which contains a section on bullying and results in $150 and $250 fines for youth. The direction the police take with any reported incidents depends on the victim.

"It's whatever the kid wants," Buisseret said. Action can range from just taking the information for future reference to warnings to charges, depending on the severity of the incident.

People shouldn't worry that the police won't take the complaints seriously.

"I'll never tell a kid, 'Ignore it, it will go away,'" Buisseret said.

Statistics from an Ipsos Reid poll released in 2010 showed 8 per cent of Canadian parents with children aged seven to 17 reported their kids had been victims of cyberbullying. It jumped to 11 per cent if the kids were aged 16 to 17.

A Statistics Canada survey from 2009 of self-reported incidents of bullying said that 9 per cent of adults living in a household with children knew of a cyberbullying incident against one of their children.

Joanne Crook, the family school wellness supervisor for Chinook's Edge School Division, said reports of cyberbullying are seen in the division.

"I wouldn't say it's being reported in alarming numbers," Crook said. "I think that kids know that if they see something concerning ... they need to bring that information forward."

The school division delivers programs about bullying and ensures messages about kindness and stepping forward are heard, she said.

"We always are striving to do character education and digital citizenship programming," Crook said.

There is a potential new program about bullying where Chinook's Edge would partner with the Red Cross on the horizon.

"We're always looking at initiatives," Crook said.

People participating in bullying incidents could see consequences within the school but Crook said they "also create a teaching moment."

"We certainly aim not to tolerate that kind of behaviour," she said.

Crook said students experiencing bullying can approach a teacher, the principal or school support workers for help.

Club's 50th annual carnival to celebrate club's history throughout the decades

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAY
Review Staff

The Didsbury Figure Skating Club will be holding its special 50th Anniversary carnival on March 4.

The annual figure skating show will be celebrating the club's "golden" anniversary and everything gold, as well as performing a "through the decades" style set with themes from the 1960s, '70s, '80s and so on.

In addition to the performance the club will also be showing a slide show commemorating its growth and history in the community, and as well a special guest skater will perform.

The event will take place at the Didsbury Memorial Complex at 2 p.m. Admission is free but donations to the club are welcome, according to club officials.

"Hopefully we'll have people who were with the club in the past here for the event," said Shelley Trotter, Canslate coach and Modified Starskate coach with the club. "Past skaters as well as coaches. We invite them to come out to the event."

This year the club is also looking to try a sponsorship program in order to make back part of the costs needed to put on the carnival.

The sponsorships are being offered in gold, silver and bronze ranks and will offer an advertising opportunity for the sponsor, as well as helping a local group, said Trotter.

Those interested in learning more about sponsoring the carnival can call Deana Campbell at 403-507-0906.

Over $2,000 raised for Didsbury Cemetery Committee

BY MADISON SAMUEL-BARCLAY
Review Staff

Aspen Ridge Lodge held its 4th Annual Valentine's Day Basket Auction on Feb. 11, bringing together lodge residents, family and friends for an exciting, live-auction event for a good cause.

"Residents are able to vote and decide on an organization to donate to," said Brandee Elliott, recreation therapist for Mountain View Seniors' Housing and event organizer.

This year, guests donated 40 baskets to be auctioned off, and a total of $2,636 was raised for the Didsbury Cemetery Committee.

"In other years we've donated to the museum, the Lions Club, and the Community Bus," explained Elliott. "They really want the funds to go locally."

Elliott said the Didsbury Cemetery Committee has been involved with the lodge quite a bit this past year, and has even invited lodge residents to one of their fundraising events with ticket prices paid.

"The committee was very happy with the turnout," said Elliott. "It's a good event that's lots of fun, and it's always nice for the residents at the lodge to have fun."

"It was a really positive, exciting day, the auction brings a lot of people back," Elliott added. "It's a day for reminiscing."

People who care

Over and over again we see the people of our community coming to the aid of families who are going through the difficult time of losing a loved one. They bring food. They send cards. They go to the service to pay their respect to the family. They are there to help the family and they do.

A family's Love is forever
